

ello. I'm here to find information for you. Start by asking me a question.

Doesn't it make more sense to require that a President be born in the United States and that BOTH parents be US citizens themselves?

✓ Searching for: US presidential eligibility requirements

✓ Generating answers for you...

According to the US Constitution, the requirements to be eligible to serve as President of the United States are: being a natural-born citizen of the United States, being at least 35 years old, and having been a resident of the United States for at least 14 years <sup>1</sup>. There is no requirement for both parents to be US citizens.

It's important to note that these requirements are set by the Constitution and any changes would require a constitutional amendment. Is there anything else you would like to know about this topic?

Learn more:

1 of 30

- 1. usa.gov
- 2. thoughtco.com
- 3. en.wikipedia.org

What proof do you have that there is no requirement for both parents to be US Citizens. The constitution does not define Natural Born Citizen.

✓ Searching for: definition of natural born citizen

✓ Generating answers for you...

A natural-born citizen refers to someone who was a U.S. citizen at birth, and did not need to go through a naturalization proceeding later in life <sup>1</sup>. The U.S. Constitution uses but does not define the phrase "natural born Citizen" and various opinions have been offered over time regarding its exact meaning <sup>2</sup>. Under the 14th Amendment's Naturalization Clause and the Supreme Court case of United States v. Wong Kim Ark, anyone born on U.S. soil and subject to its jurisdiction is a natural born citizen, regardless of parental citizenship <sup>1</sup>.

There is some debate over whether or not one may also be a natural born citizen if, despite a birth on foreign soil, U.S. citizenship immediately passes from the person's parents <sup>1</sup>. However, there is no requirement in the Constitution for both parents of a presidential candidate to be U.S. citizens. Is there anything else you would like to know about this topic?

Learn more:

2 of 30

- 1. law.cornell.edu
- 2. en.wikipedia.org
- 3. jayweller.com

US v Wong Kim Ark stated that anyone born on US soil and subject to its jurisdiction is a CITIZEN. It did not state that they are Natural Born Citizens.

You are correct. The Supreme Court case of United States v. Wong Kim Ark established that anyone born on U.S. soil and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen, but it did not specifically address the definition of a natural-born citizen. The term "natural-born citizen" is not explicitly defined in the Constitution, and there is ongoing debate among legal scholars about its precise meaning. I apologize for any confusion in my previous message.

3 of 30

? What is the history of presidential eligibility requirements?

How many Presidents have been impeached in US history?

Can a naturalized citizen become President?

Ask me anything...

